Moving? Take Your First Steps Toward Organization Today

A residential or office move can be both exciting and exhausting. With small steps and a little help, your move can be the optimal time to organize your home or office. And if you aren't moving this summer, you'll still benefit from our organizational tips this month.

When prepping for a move (or just clearing clutter at home), ask yourself: "Does this object add value to my life and/or business?", "Do I love it enough to pay someone to move it?" and "If I were to start fresh today, what items would I include in this space?" Pretending to move is a great way to get started organizing your home or office.

Purging is an important first step in any move process. In our post, Schedule a Clean Out Day we give you some suggestions for making your move less chaotic by first tossing out items that won't be making the trip. Visit our Residential Results page and see how we've helped clients simplify their move.

Changing your address, voter registration, etc., should get checked off your list right away. Take the time today (even if you're not currently moving) to opt out of mail you don't want to receive. You may just save yourself some time and a few trees, too. The tips in Reduce Stress and Opt Out will get you started.

Moves, large and small, are often overwhelming. If you could use some additional sets of hands for your next residential or business move, let us know! Try starting out small by tackling some of our Tuesday Ten Minute Toss ideas, recent topics include: Toss the Snack Drawer, Toss Magazines, Toss Shoes, and Toss Umbrellas and get motivated to accomplish your moving goals.

Do you have a topic or organizing question that you would like us to blog about? We love to hear from you, so please tell us what you'd like to read about!
